Two interesting papers were read at yesterday morning session, the first entitled "Apropos of a Portrait of Pierre Fourthard," by Doctor George Vian of L'Ecole Dentaire d'Paris, and the second on "The Dental Corps of the United States Army," by Doctor John L. Marshall.

Doctor Vian's paper was sent to the Congress and read by one of the members. He sent with it a portrait of Doctor Pierre Fourchard, whom dentists call "the father of dentistry." He had faith in his calling and endeavored to place it on a higher plane. He gave it serious study, and in 1837 published a book called "Le Chirurglen Dentiste."
